Local Candidates running

Twenty-one persons who live or work in the Capitol East area are running for posts in the May 7 primary. The slate led by Channing Phillips and Flaxie Pinkett -- which supports Robert F. Kennedy for president -- includes six local candidates: Mary Lanier, Rev. Charles S. Williams, Daniel I. Fivel, Samuel F. H. Smith, Lola J. Singletary, and Nadine Winter.

The John Immer independent Democratic slate includes three local persons: Byron N. Scott, Janis E. N. Scott and Walter A. Gray.

The pro-Administration Democratic slate headed by E. Franklin Jackson has two: Bryant Harris and Wilhelmina Payne.

On the Republican side, the Breuninger-Guarino ticket includes nine Capitol East residents: Frank Milner, Minnie P. Hackney, Henry A. Lange, Edward George Post, S. White Rhyne Jr., Columbia B. Scott, VanDyke A. Walker, Dr. Lanxter Derr Webber, and John Luther Whitehead.

The Shipley - Hahn slate has one: Mrs. Kathryn E. Bowers and the Satterlee GOP slate has none.

New pool design

The District has developed a new plan for the Near SE indoor-outdoor pool which it expects to submit to the Fine Arts Commission in the near future. The Commission rejected earlier sketches. The new design has a rectangular facade with large quantities of glass that can be rolled back during pleasant weather. An estimated 480 persons can use the two pools at one time.

The plan was well received by representatives of the Capitol Hill Community Council, the Emergency Recreation Council and the Capitol Hill Restoration Society who viewed it last month.

The new design sketches were drawn by Eugene Delmar and James Hilleary who were architects for the Transportation Dept. building at 6th & D SW. Delmar also was responsible for the design of Goding School, 9th & F NE.

Police reserve planned

The Fifth Precinct is planning to establish a 200-man auxiliary police reserve using local residents. Members would undergo training and work alongside regular officers. Precinct officials feel the plan will ease the police workload here and will improve police-community relations. Those interested are asked to call officers Cephas or Fulwood at 626-2375.

'Black Dragon' coming

"Ballad of the Black Dragon," a play based on the life of Frederick Douglass, will be presented at St. Mark's, 301 A SE, on May 10, 11, and 12. The play was written by C. P. Gabel and adapted by Jay Williams, who plays the role of Douglass. For tickets call any of the following numbers: LI 3-0053, 542-7424 or 544-5400.

Ninth slows crime rate

The Ninth Precinct had its lowest crime rate increase in many months during March. Crime climbed only one-tenth of one percent compared with March 1967. Meanwhile, the Fifth continued to knock down the crime rate within its borders. This March's figures were 18.9% lower than in March 1967.

There was, however, a noticeable jump in robberies in both precincts.

Riot Losses Here Are Counted In Millions

Capitol East Picks Up the Pieces

SEVERAL DAYS OF rioting resulted in more than $3 million worth of property damage and several deaths in Capitol East following the assassination of Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., April 4. In the vicinity of H St. NE alone some 124 commercial establishments and 52 residential units were damaged, with property damage running close to $2 million. Another 21 business establishments were damaged on or near 8th St.

The destruction did not end with the quelling of the riot and the removal of federal troops who had guarded the area after being called in by city officials. Sporadic arson occurred, primarily along H St., doing hundreds of thousands of dollars additional damage.

But as the month came to an end the violence subsided and Capitol East began picking up the pieces. Reactions to the disturbance varied from the intense anger of many white merchants at the failure of police to shoot looters to the feeling on the part of some community leaders that a new opportunity had been created to correct old economic and social wrongs in Capitol East. At a meeting of the Near NE

Business and Professional Council, one H St. businessman told Public Safety Director Patrick Murphy he was either "blind or stupid" not to have known early in the disturbance that it was going to get much worse and for failing to take more drastic action. Murphy strongly defended police restraint in the use of firearms. Another businessman at that meeting, however, was Milton Hoffman -- whose Art Young's clothing store was burned in the riot. Hoffman proposed a one percent of gross sales contribution by businesses to be used for community projects.

Several community groups testified at District Council hearings on ways to rebuild damaged areas. The Near NE Group Ministry and the Near NE Federation issued a statement in which they said "one of our primary concerns is the retention of money earned in the Near NE and the District. We are committed to the goal of keeping the profits close to the people and within the community that has enabled them."

The groups also urged the development of a multi-service shopping center in Near NE.

The damage -- most apparent along H St. -- in-

Rebuilding the ghetto'

THE TALK NOW is of "rebuilding the ghetto." It is one of those phrases that tells much more about those in power than they would like to admit or want us to know. In truth, if the traditional economic, social and political forces operated unhindered, that is precisely what will happen. The ghetto will be rebuilt, with new buildings to be sure, but with the old injustices, exploitations and discriminations that have always been there.

That is why those who have been urging the city to halt mechanisms that will rush the return of the old order speak wisely. There must be time for the community to think, study and plan alternatives to the ways of the past and there must be given to the community the right to determine the ways of the future.

There have been a number of thoughtful proposals already put forward. The plan offered by Pride, Inc., for example contains a number of excellent ideas. There are groups that have been meeting in this area to develop plans for H St. And individuals have come up with interesting and novel suggestions, such as Milton Hoffman of Art Young's clothing store, who suggested a voluntary contribution to the community of one percent of local businesses' gross sales.

There are many questions to be considered. (Please turn to page 10)

LAWRENCE HALPRIN demonstrates that he knows something about basketball as well as landscape architecture as he balances ball on one finger while talking to youths at the Bryan Playground. The Lila Wallace Fund has given $20,000 to improve the area around the playground at the Near SE school and Halprin, picked as consulting architect, wanted some expert advice. So one Saturday morning last month he visited the playground and talked extensively with youths there. They made several suggestions --including building a place to dance and expanding the basketball area. That's District Councilwoman Polly Shackleton at left.

Pens But No Ink At Court

ONE NEEDN'T BE a lawyer to appreciate the SUPREME COURT (1st and E. Capitol). The building alone is sufficiently striking. The classical facade of gleaming white marble may be viewed best from the Capitol grounds topped with elaborate Corinthian capitals. Above is the motto "Equal Justice Under Law" and an enormous sculpted pediment. There are tours of the building every day except Sunday during May, although the Court sits only five days this month.

The Supreme Court has been called America's special contribution to political theory -- a court given final power to decide disputes between the citizen and his government. Cases come to it from the court systems of the fifty states, from the eleven Federal Courts of Appeals and sometimes from lower Federal Courts. Several thousand cases are brought before the Court each year, and the nine Justices select about 150 to hear and review.

Of necessity, the public may see only a fraction of this lengthy process: oral arguments and decisions. There are impressive, sometimes historic, procedures, but more impressive still is the time-consuming and difficult task of decision-making each Justice undertakes by himself.

The Supreme Court is also a repository of tradition. Although formal clothes are no longer required for lawyers appearing here (the Solicitor General of the United States and his staff are the only ones to appear in cutaways and striped trousers), fresh quill pens, but no ink, continue to be placed on the lawyers' tables every day. Souvenirs, it is refreshing to note, are appreciated even on such elevated planes.

During May, there are free guided tours Monday through Friday, 9:30 am to 4 pm. On Saturdays, tours are given 9:30 -- 11:30 am. They begin in the Marshall's office, Room 114. The

The FOLGER SHAKESPEARE LIBRARY (201 E. Capitol) is to Shakespeare buffs what an untended ice cream store is to a small boy. The library contains the world's largest collection of Shakespeareana, which it houses in an Elizabethan exhibition hall. There's a full scale replica of a 17th century English playhouse with its three-tiered stage and a scale model of the Globe

Theater where many of Shakespeare's plays were first produced.

Props from famous interpretations of the Bard's works are displayed: David Garrick's "Hamlet" prompt book, Edwin Booth's mace from "Macbeth," and Romney's portrait of Lady Hamilton as Titania in "A Mid-Summer Night's Dream." Changing exhibits highlight various aspects of life during the reign of the first Elizabeth. Only the reference library is closed to tourists.

SE Road Illegal?Freeway Foes Press Fight

FOES OF THE District freeway construction program are investigating the possibility of legal action against projects not included in a recent court order halting much expressway construction in the city. The order -- which said the District had failed to follow the law in building the superroads -- did not cover several projects, including the SE Freeway from 6th St. to Barney Circle. This road will cut across one of the last large remaining pieces of undeveloped open space in the city. These projects were not included in the suit that resulted in the court order. It is likely, however, that the same principles of law apply to these projects and the Emergency Committee on the Transportation Crisis, which has led the anti-freeway fight here, is looking into the opportunity for further action.

The Committee also hopes for a new vote in the National Capital Planning Commission on the freeway question. The freeways were narrowly approved by the Commission after the National Park Service representative made an agreement with the DC Highway Department on the use of parkland for road construction. Freeway foes feel they now have a majority of support on the Commission and that, anyway, a vote would flush out Commissioner Walter Washington who has been attempting to maintain an ambiguous position on the matter. Washington has proposed legislation that would permit the completion of projects currently well underway but require public hearings before finally deciding other freeway routes. The bill also would allow bonus payments to homeowners for houses torn down for the roads.

Although Washington claims that his measure is an improvement over pending congressional legislation that would force the District to complete all planned freeways, critics argue that it will have the same result. They note that the public hearings are for the purpose of determining routes and not for deciding whether or not there should be any more freeways in the District. Further, they point out that no public hearings would be required for the completion of projects such as the center leg or Capitol East's SE (Please turn to page 9)

NE Youth Hits Police Arrest

JAMES WITCHER, A NE youth worker, charged last month that he was injured by 9th Precinct patrolman after being arrested following an altercation in the Ko-Ko Club, 8th & H NE. Witcher claimed he was roughed up as he was being placed in a patrol wagon and that he was thrown against a wall in the 9th Precinct and kicked by officers there.

Witcher, who has been working at the Near NE Youth Center at 1335 H NE, addressed a meeting of the Near NE Business and Professional Council 12 hours before the incident. Sharing the platform was Public Safety Director Patrick Murphy. Witcher has filed a complaint against two white officers.

Freeway. Finally, they claim that the extra-payment provision is a bribe to homeowners in the path of the freeways to consent to their construction. If the city were really sincere, critics say, it would separate the payment issue from the freeway issue and apply the payment formula to all cases of acquisition by eminent domain, such as the purchase of homes for school sites.

The Emergency Committee outlined its position at a lengthy meeting last month with Commissioner Washington and the District Council. Afterwards, it was learned that at least one councilman had significantly altered his previous position of support of the freeways.

JOHN LAYTON 1913 - 1968

In Memorium

WE mourn the death April 7 of John Layton, a man who gave unstintingly to the community, who served Northeast in many roles as a friend, leader, and hard worker for youth and the general community. John died as he lived, while assisting the poor and the troubled. He used his last strength to help bring food to the hungry.

THERE is much to do in our Capitol East. There is more urgency than ever before in the work to better our community. There is more need than ever before to unify our community, help our youth, to work towards the end of poverty and to put our community on the move. We must all work harder than ever before, and in this work the dedicated strength and steadfastness of John Layton will be sorely missed.

AMONG the many recognitions given this outstanding man was the position of Vice Chairman for Northeast of the Emergency Recreation Council for Capitol East. We all mourn his passing.

WHEN police found a group in and about the People's Drug Store at Lincoln Park, they forced those present into the store, then tear gassed it. Here a man leaves the store in a cloud of gas. There were other reports of questionable use of tear gas. A looted corner store in Near SE was left unguarded but gassed several times to prevent additional stealing. The fumes filled nearby homes of the Arthur Capper Dwellings causing considerable discomfort and some illness to residents. Generally, however, police restraint was credited with preventing a dangerous escalation of the disturbance. For pictures of how police handled another looting incident, see page 6.

Summer Park Plan Unveiled

THE NATIONAL PARK Service has unveiled an extensive "Summer in the Parks" plan that could, if it goes off on schedule, provide a substantial increase in recreational opportunity in this area.

The NPS intends to make the east bank of the Anacostia River the main center of activity, offering swimming, baseball, skill and hobby tents, entertainment, playground equipment and facilities for older persons.

The Park Service is also asking communities to select one neighborhood park to be used for summer programs and mobile recreation units.

There are plans for shuttle bus service to bring people to the play areas, but these seem somewhat questionable since the Park Service is having difficulty lining up busses that it can use.

Among the programs suggested for the community parks are these: performing platform with lights, exhibition and instruction in sports, concerts, jazzmobile, and puppet shows.

The NPS recently revealed its summer aspirations to a group of community leaders and asked for their support in developing programs and finding logistical support for them.

sidered. What is the proper mixture of business and residential units on H St.? How can black-owned and community-owned businesses prosper in Capitol East rather than be the economic orphans of the area? Can effective competition to Safeway be found? How could cooperatives be started? Should some of the destroyed areas of H St. be turned into recreation centers? What lessons can be learned for this community from the efforts of Chicago's Operation Breadbasket, which has markedly increased black employment, business ownership and income on the South Side?

One of the hazards of the sort of instant urban renewal caused by a riot is that the land clearing precedes the planning. After it is over, those in the best financial and political position to take advantage of the situation do so and the government often becomes the silent partner in the deal. There are signs that the District government will follow this route. It is hard to have faith in officials who have so completely ignored the people's wishes on matters such as the freeways and who have not even bothered to take advantage of the rent supplement program.

But it is not too late for Walter Washington to realize the futility of toadying to the Board of Trade, the White House and the congressional neanderthals and start representing the people. He could do so most effectively by making clear that his government does not intend to subsidize the rebuilding of the ghetto, but rather determines to build new communities planned and approved by those who live in them.

John Layton

JOHN LAYTON WAS an exceptional man and an exceptional friend. Although in his fifties, he easily found the bridge across the generation gap and made all of us who knew him younger for it. It's ironic that it was his heart that failed him, for in every sense except biologically, his heart was as big and robust as one could hope to find.

Anderson Reelected

REV. JESSE ANDERSON has been reelected chairman of the Near SE Neighborhood Planning Council.

Mrs. V. Wilkerson has been elected vice chairman and Eric Von Cole has been elected youth representative.

Forty-eight persons attended the election meeting.

The major problem facing the new officers is the threatened cutback in summer funds for youth programs throughout the city.

In Capitol East alone, planning council officials have been told to expect a cut of over $100,000. Last summer's programs were well received here and there is considerable dismay about the cuts.

licated a certain selectivity on the part of rioters. Most Negro establishments -- with large "Soul Brother" signs plastered on windows and walls -- were left alone. So were private social agencies and public offices such as anti-poverty centers. The Southeast Enrichment Center was burned out, but that fire was the result of one started next door in a uniform shop. Governor Ronald Reagan of California visited the center less than three hours before it burned.

The violence reached its peak Friday night, April 5, as flames shot into the sky from fires set in buildings along H St. Another major fire, at 16th & F NE, engulfed an ice plant and a supermarket and threatened to spread to an ammonia storage tank nearby.

Damage in Near SE was much more restricted than in Near NE. Eighth St. and the stores in the vicinity of 15th & Independence Ave. were the most heavily hit.

The 7th St. SE shopping area was largely left alone.

Safeways were popular targets throughout Capitol East. One exception was the Super Safeway at 14th & Ky. SE which was open for business the Sunday after the riot. Customers fell into long lines to buy food at one of the few markets still in business. Another spared chain store was the A & P at 12th & Pa. SE. A large sign in the window noted: "Soul Management."

Little personal violence was reported in this area and the deaths that occurred were due to persons becoming trapped in burning buildings or -- in one case -- to a wall falling on a man. John

Market Day Sets Record Despite It All

Layton, Near NE community leader and longtime worker with neighborhood youths, suffered a fatal heart attack after working nearly 24 hours giving out food to needy persons.

With the arrival of federal troops, H St. was sealed off, with only military, police and fire personnel permitted in the area. Platoons of soldiers from the 6th Armored Cavalry guarded the devastated remains of what had once been Capitol East's busiest business district.

On 8th St. SE, Marines stood guard with fixed bayonets to prevent looting. And under the dome of the Capitol itself, machine guns were mounted, adding a final grim touch to the military occupation of the District.

At times, however, an almost festive mood prevailed here as small children, teenagers and adults made off with bounty from looted stores. In some cases, parents sent their children to rummage in stores that had been broken into. In SE, a white woman babysat two Negro children while their older sister was out collecting spoils.

As the situation calmed down, local churches, settlement houses and anti-poverty centers began moving to to provide for those left without shelter, food or clothing.

Perhaps the most unusual precaution taken against damage during the riot was that devised by construction workers on the SE Freeway. A small trailer-mounted compressor engine was lifted by a crane several stories into the air and left dangling out of reach.

Although the days following the riot brought a torrent of analysis, comment, and recrimination in the community, perhaps the best epilogue to the April weekend that shook Capitol East last month is contained in some cold statistics about the community that have been compiled by government agencies:

■ Over 25% of the labor force in NE and Near SE is either unemployed, earning less than $3000 a year or employed only parttime.

■ Over half of all adults living in Capitol East west of 15th St. have 8 years of schooling or less.

■ And 27% of the housing units in Capitol East west of 15th St. were considered dilapidated or deteriorating as of the 1960 census. The situation has not markedly improved since then.

Suddenly last month, these cold statistics touched every corner of Capitol East.
